

A City At Work

A Photography Exhibition Celebrating Greenville and
City Employees as they work to serve our citizens

August 27 through September 26, 2019

ARTIST BIOGRAPHY

Aaron Hines is a Communications Specialist with the City of Greenville's Public Information Office. Specializing in photography and graphic design, Aaron's passion for improving the community drives his desire to inform the citizens of Greenville with the most effective and engaging visual communications possible. Numerous industry awards and accolades illustrate his dedication to public service through photography and design. A graduate of Appalachian State University, Aaron's career has included 5 years in furniture design, 6 years in live event and video production, and even a short time as a small boat craftsman. Aaron and his family (wife Lindsey, and children Jacob and Savannah) moved to Greenville in 2016.

EXHIBITION STATEMENT

The services provided by the City cannot function without skilled and dedicated personnel to manage and carry out the necessary work required. The photographs presented in this exhibition were selected to highlight the dedicated, hard-working, and often-overlooked public servants of the City of Greenville with honor, respect, and dignity.

As an employee of the City of Greenville, I take great pride in bringing attention to the men and women who work tirelessly to make the city safe, clean, and a wonderful place to live. Being able to capture images that speak to the essence of a community and its public servants has been a highlight of my career and a job that I approach with tremendous responsibility deserving of my best effort and energy. Through this work, I hope that greater attention will be given to the City's public servants and that it may inspire others to pursue careers in service to their community.
